

Parker Jervis Mausoleum

Neo-classical mausoleum built on a rectangular ground plan (4.5m x 7.3m) sunk within the surrounding churchyard and bounded by roughly hewn sandstone retaining walls. White Hollington sandstone ashlar walls (with core of brick) having pronounced batter and roll moulded cornice in the Doric style at blocking course. Concealed roof. Square-headed doorway with chamfered lintel and reveals. Timber door having wrought-iron furniture.

St Saviours Churchyard
Aston-by-Stone
Staffordshire
ST15 0BJ
England

Architects

Year Built

Style

1864

Neo-Classical

Listing

Grade II (England and Wales)

Condition

English Heritage carried out a structural engineering report in 2001 following the collapse of a section of the boundary retaining wall.

The mausoleum is currently blanketed in maturing vegetation and tree-life which have led to the displacement of masonry at high level (2013).

History

The mausoleum was erected by the Honourable Edward Swinfen Parker Jervis of Little Aston Hall and his son Edward John Parker Jervis of Aston House, Aston by Stone. It was built by John Wood and consecrated on 9th April 1864.

Sources

Photos

Location

SatNav Co-ordinates: 52.88423644725932, -2.1277837019490824